The network is led by flagship WKRC-TV (Ch. 12) in Cincinnati. Radio: Coverage on the 28-station Bengals Radio Network, including a "triple-cast" in Cincinnati on flagships WLW-AM (700) "The Big One," WCKY-AM (1530) "Homer" (all sports) and WEBN-FM (102.7) Broadcasters are Brad Johansen (play-by-play) and Dave Lapham (analyst).

Setting the scene: It might have been easy enough for the Bengals to say everything will be fine in 2009, that their 4-11-1 record of 2008 was darned near unavoidable. Pro Bowl QB Carson Palmer played in only four games due to an elbow injury, and 23 other players wound up being placed on the Reserve/Injured list — a franchise record.

But head coach Marvin Lewis is looking to see far more than just improved health as his seventh Bengals edition prepares to open the '09 preseason this week at New Orleans.

"This is a remade team," Lewis says. "I believe we are upgraded at nearly every position, and we know who our leaders are. We start from scratch, knowing we've found some players who are going to be able to help us."

And football fate, of course, helps those who help themselves. Thus, Lewis is charging every player and coach with making a personal commitment to being sharper and more resilient, whatever hardship injuries or other factors may bring.

"Every team can be as good as any team," he says. "That's why it's called a football 'team.' The differences in talent are not that great. It's a matter of making plays in critical moments. Don't make critical errors. That's how teams win."

The Bengals' anticipated upgrade at QB this season is the obvious starting point for optimism. Palmer, a two-time Pro Bowl selection, healed from his elbow injury without surgery and has participated in all team work since the start of the 2009 offseason program. The offensive line has been shuffled and must prove itself, but elsewhere on the offense:

- At running back, Cedric Benson, a former Nov. 4 overall NFL draft pick, is back with the benefit of his first full year in the Bengals system. After joining the Bengals in late September last year, Benson gave every indication that he has successfully jump-started his pro career after an underachieving start in Chicago.

- At wide receiver, five-time Pro Bowler Chad Ochocinco is fully healthy again after a down year in '08. The Bengals saw T.J. Houshmandzadeh depart in free agency, but replaced him with a proven producer in Laveranues Coles. The abundantly talented Chris Henry may finally have matured after a rash of off-field issues, and two high draft picks — Andre Caldwell and Jerome Simpson — are entering their second seasons.

Defensively, the Bengals have their highest hopes in recent years. Fiery coordinator Mike Zimmer worked through injuries to mold a unit which finished 12th in the NFL last season in fewest yards allowed, and there are multiple reasons to expect more improvement:

- On the line, Robert Geathers and Antwan Odom are veteran ends in their prime. Both figure to contribute more after being limited by injuries last season, and rookie DE Michael Johnson has been an early camp standout. At tackle, rugged Tank Johnson comes on as a veteran free agent, joining promising younger prospects in Domata Peko and Pat Sims.

- At LB, top '08 draft pick Keith Rivers of USC was impressive last year but missed more than half the season with a broken jaw. The '09 draft brings another exciting USC prospect in Rey Mauluga, and there are three solid producers returning in Dhani Jones, Rashad Jeanty and Brandon Johnson.

- The secondary features two first-round draft picks at CB (Leon Hall and Johnathan Joseph), and a deep safety corps bolstered by the free agent addition of five-time Pro Bowler Roy Williams.

"We see so many reasons that the sky can be the limit for this team," says Palmer. "But now it's time to show that."

The series: The Saints lead the Bengals 6-1 in preseason play, including 2-0 in games in New Orleans. In regular-season play, the Bengals lead by a 6-5 margin.

New Orleans has won the last six preseason meetings, the most recent a 13-0 decision at Cincinnati last season. The Bengals' only preseason win over New Orleans was in the first game of the preseason series, 20-0 at Cincinnati in 1975. The clubs have not played in preseason at New Orleans since 1989, when the Saints prevailed by 27-10.

The Bengals have won the last three regular-season meetings, most recently a 31-16 decision in 2006 at the Superdome. The Bengals and Saints will not meet in the 2009 regular season, but will play at Cincinnati in 2010.

More from Marvin: "Throughout the entire offseason and training camp," says head coach Marvin Lewis, "I think there has been a sense of excitement. We open up our season at home (Sept. 13 vs. Denver), and that's big. How the season ended up last year didn't sit well with the leaders of this football team. When you grind the way you grind and you don't get anything for it, you don't like Mondays. You keep that in the back of your mind. We were able to pull out of it a little bit and have some fun at the end of the year, but that doesn't account for anything right now. We've got to start from scratch and do it over. We've got to start being productive and make football plays and good decisions right from the start. We can't put ourselves in error."

Tough opening test: Yes, it's just a preseason opener, and no, the front-line players won't be seeing extended action. But at least in the early going at the Superdome, a Bengals defense with great promise for 2009 will face an offense that was the NFL's hardest to stop in 2008.

In '08, New Orleans led the NFL in scoring (28.9), net yards per game (410.7) and passing yards per game (311.1). In addition to leading the NFL in individual passing yards, Saints QB Drew Brees tied for the league lead in TD passes (34) and ranked fourth in passer rating (96.2).

The head coaches

Marvin Lewis is in his seventh season as Bengals head coach, one year from tying Paul Brown and Sam Wyche for the franchise's longest tenure of eight seasons. In Bengals head coaching victories, he also ranks third (behind Wyche and Brown).

Lewis' record over his six previous campaigns is 46-49-1 in the regular season, 0-1 in postseason and 46-50-1 overall. He needs nine victories to tie Paul Brown (55-59-1) in Bengals annals and is 18 wins behind Wyche (64-68). His Bengals log includes an AFC North Division championship in 2005, and he coached his first five years (2003-07) without experiencing a losing season, the club's longest such streak since a six-year span from 1972-77.

Lewis enters 2009 tied for fifth in the NFL for current consecutive seasons as a head coach (seven). He has also cracked the active top 10 for most total seasons as an NFL head coach, sharing ninth place at seven with Jacksonville head coach Jack Del Rio.

Lewis' preseason record with the Bengals is 12-12.

Lewis was named the ninth Bengals head coach on Jan. 14, 2003. In 2002, he directed the NFL's fifth-ranked defense with Washington, serving as assistant head coach in addition to his role as defensive coordinator. Prior to his year with the Redskins, he was a record-setting defensive coordinator for the Baltimore Ravens. His six seasons (1996-2001) with the Ravens included a Super Bowl victory following the 2000 season. In the 2000 regular season, Lewis' Baltimore defense set the NFL record for fewest points allowed in a 16-game campaign (165).

Lewis entered the NFL as linebackers coach with Pittsburgh from 1993-95, guiding the careers of Pro Bowl selections Kevin Greene, Chad Brown, Levon Kirkland and Greg Lloyd.

Born Sept. 23, 1958, in McDonald, Pa., near Pittsburgh, Lewis played linebacker at Idaho State and earned All-Big Sky Conference honors in each of his three seasons (1978-80). He began his coaching career as an assistant coach at Idaho State in 1981.

Sean Payton is in his fourth season as Saints head coach. His record is 26-24, including 1-1 in postseason. In his first year as head coach, he earned consensus NFL Coach of the Year honors after guiding the Saints to a 10-6 record, NFC South title and a berth in the NFC Championship game.

Payton began his NFL coaching career as quarterbacks coach for the Philadelphia Eagles in 1997-98. He was offensive coordinator for the final three years of a four-year stay (1999-2002) with the New York Giants, and he was with the Dallas Cowboys from '03-05, serving as assistant head coach with an emphasis on quarterbacks and the passing game.

He coached in college at Indiana State, San Diego State and Miami (Ohio). At Miami, he was quarterbacks coach/co-offensive coordinator in 1994-95.

Payton was a three-time Division I-AA All-American quarterback at Eastern Illinois, and finished his career with a school-record 10,665 passing yards. He played in the pro ranks with Chicago of the Arena Football League and the Ottawa Rough Riders of the Canadian League before joining the Chicago Bears for a portion of the 1987 season.

Payton was born Dec. 29, 1963 in San Mateo, Calif., and was raised in Naperville, Ill.

Lewis vs. Saints: Lewis trails 0-2 in preseason and leads 1-0 in the regular season.

Lewis vs. Payton: Same as Lewis vs. Saints.

Payton vs. Bengals: Payton leads 2-0 in preseason and trails 0-1 in the regular season.

Bengals information

Re-tooled line ready for test: One major story line for this week's preseason opener will be the performance of the offensive line, which has only one player — RG Bobbie Williams — starting in a position where he played at least half the season a year ago.

Elsewhere on the line, Andrew Whitworth has moved to LOT after playing LG last year, Nate Livings is out to put a firm hold on the LG spot he claimed late last year, and C Kyle Cook steps up for his first NFL starting assignment. At ROT, first-round draft pick Andre Smith had been penciled into the No. 1 spot, but Smith's absence due to protracted contract negotiations has left the assignment with second-year man Anthony Collins.

"We like our raw material, we think we can be much better than last year," says offensive coordinator Bob Bratkowski, "but it's a unit that will need some time to come together. In preseason, we've got to walk a fine line, not getting the guys beat up, but giving them enough reps to get better."

Whitworth says "our talent is going to show," and he is a booster of the line's chemistry after going through the first wave of training camp practices.

"I love the energy," he says. "We have a lot to prove, but history shows that more often than not, the team that has something to prove is more successful than a team that doesn't think it has a lot to prove. I like our mixture of guys. I think that a lot of times, the experience factor is exaggerated. We've got two guys who have played a lot of games (Whitworth and Williams), and then young guys who are talented and hungry. I'll take it."

Comeback player, comeback team? HB Cedric Benson and the Bengals have been on roughly parallel paths since 2005.

In '05, the Bengals won a division championship, and Benson joined the Chicago Bears with high hopes as the No. 4 overall pick in the NFL draft. But the Bengals have been out of the playoffs since then, and Benson has been largely out of the spotlight. He was released by the Bears after 2007, carrying mediocre numbers and a reputation as a malcontent player with off-field problems.

But things started picking up again in 2008. An injury-ridden Bengals team rallied from a disastrous start to post a 4-3-1 record over the season's second half, and Benson was a big part of it. Rescued from the ranks of the NFL unemployed in late September, he went on to post three 100-yard rushing games, to lead the team in rushing yards (747) and yards from scrimmage (932), and to earn a new reputation as a valued teammate and friendly figure to media.

"Ced has not taken a play off since he's been here," says QB Carson Palmer, "in a game or in practice. Just in T-shirts and shorts here in camp, he's going 100 miles an hour. Maybe some people wondered about him personally when he first got here, but he put that to rest in a hurry and earned everyone's respect."

Benson was completely exonerated from the off-field charges which helped lead to Chicago's decision to release him in June of 2008. But he concedes he did not always carry himself or his emotions well while with Chicago. He says the rough period after his release helped effect the changes his teammates and Bengals fans have seen.

"I'm proud to have gone through what I did, and to have turned things around," he says.

Now comes the challenge. For Benson to live up to the promise from his stellar college career at Texas, and for the Bengals to return to the postseason. Coach Marvin Lewis says the biggest reason to expect a better Benson in 2009 is his increased command of Cincinnati's offensive scheme.

"It starts right now," Benson says. "We worked hard in the offseason, and I don't want to hold anything back. I'm looking forward to the preseason (games), because that shows what you really learned, and you get your timing down."

Rookie to watch: The Bengals still expect a fine season from unsigned OT Andre Smith, their first-round draft pick, and the club remains very enthused over the prospects of LB Rey Mauluga, taken in the second round. But in training camp, no rookie has received the unreserved praise head coach Marvin Lewis bestowed on DE Michael Johnson, third-round pick from Georgia Tech.

"Mike has done a really good job," Lewis said last week, during his second training camp news conference. "He has exceeded my expectations, and my expectations were high. Of all the rookie players that I've been around in the NFL, he's played as fast and as physical and has made as many football plays early in camp as any of them. I have been really pleased with Mike."

It's unusual, to say the least, for Lewis to speak so plainly in touting a rookie. But the Bengals have noted since draft day that Johnson came with exceedingly high potential for a player who lasted until the third round. At 6-7 and 265 pounds, Johnson is an imposing player physically. He inspires best-scenario hopes of a career like the one enjoyed by Hall of Famer Ted "The Stork" Hendricks, but he weighs 30 pounds more than Hendricks did.

At his best in college, he clearly played like a first-round NFL draft pick, but he came out of Georgia Tech with a reputation for not getting the most of himself on an every-play basis. Hence, he had to wait until the draft's second day, selected with the No. 70 overall pick.

"When you watched him on tape," said Bengals defensive coordinator Mike Zimmer, "there were plays that made you say, 'Oh wow, I can't believe he could do that. On other plays, you said, 'Heck, he didn't do very good there.' But he's a first-class kid — top notch, 100 percent — and it's our job as coaches to get the best out of him on every play."

Johnson has vowed he will listen to all critiques "from people who have my best interests at heart," and that he will work to make teams holding those first 69 draft picks regret they didn't keep him from becoming a Bengal.

Johnson was one of the defensive standouts in the club's annual Intrasquad Scrimmage at training camp on Aug. 7, posting the only two sacks of the contest.

Palmer rates with greats: The Bengals look with much anticipation to QB Carson Palmer's full return in 2009, and a comparison of top Cincinnati QBs shows why. Despite not playing as a rookie in 2004, as well as playing only four games in 2008, Palmer already holds his own in team passing records against Ken Anderson and Boomer Esiason, the Bengals' two Super Bowl quarterbacks.

Palmer owns the franchise's career records for passer rating and completion percentage, and he holds season marks for TD passes, rating, yards and completions. He also holds the game record for TD passes.

Chad still best, by far: Though WR Chad Ochocinco experienced the first down year of his career last season, set back by a chronic sore shoulder and the absence of QB Carson Palmer from the lineup, the "Ocho" enters 2009 in full health and is bent on further extending his already wide leads in Bengals all-time receptions and receiving yards.

He will bid for his sixth selection for the Pro Bowl, which he missed last year after making the game the previous five seasons. Over the five seasons 2003-07, he posted the five highest receiving yards totals in Bengals history, topped by a record 1440 yards in '07.

Ochocinco finished 2008 with 612 catches for his career (all with Cincinnati). He is the only Bengal to reach the 600 mark for a Cincinnati career and is now 82 ahead of second-place Carl Pickens. In receiving yards, he pushed his total to 8905, more than 1800 yards ahead of second-place Isaac Curtis.

And Ochocinco is just 31 years old entering this season, presumably with many more opportunities to fatten his leads.

The current top five for all-time Bengals receptions:

PLAYERS	YEARS	SEASONS	RECEPTIONS
Chad Ochocinco	8	2001-08	612
Carl Pickens	8	1992-99	530
T.J. Houshmandzadeh	8	2001-08	507
Cris Collinsworth	8	1981-88	417
Isaac Curtis	12	1973-84	416

And the current top five for all-time Bengals receiving yards:

PLAYERS	YEARS	SEASONS	REC. YARDS
Chad Ochocinco	8	2001-08	8905
Isaac Curtis	12	1973-84	7101
Carl Pickens	8	1992-99	6887
Cris Collinsworth	8	1981-88	6698
Eddie Brown	7	1985-91	6134

Chad ties Curtis: WR Chad Ochocinco ended the 2008 season with 53 receiving TDs, tying Isaac Curtis for second place all-time on the Bengals. Curtis played 12 seasons (1973-84), while Ochocinco has played eight. Ochocinco is now within 10 of the all-time Bengals leader in receiving TDs, Carl Pickens with 63. Pickens played eight seasons for Cincinnati (1992-99).

Ochocinco now ranks tied for fourth with Curtis in total Bengals TDs (both at 53). The record is 70 by FB Pete Johnson, while Pickens shares second place with RB James Brooks at 64.

Ocho at the Dome: In his only previous appearance at the Louisiana Superdome — on Nov. 19, 2006 — Bengals WR Chad Ochocinco posted the third-highest receiving yards total of his career, gaining 190 yards on just six catches and tying a Bengals record with three TD catches. He led the Bengals to a 31-16 victory.

His 190-yard total followed a career-high 260-yard performance the previous week against San Diego, and it gave him a 450-yard total for the two games, which still stands as an all-time NFL record for receiving yards in consecutive contests.

Chad at 105 straight: WR Chad Ochocinco has caught at least one pass in 105 consecutive games, a Bengals record. He hit the 105 mark on Dec. 14 of last season vs. Washington. He was inactive the last two weeks of the season, due to a hamstring injury, but games missed do not affect such a streak, according to the Elias Sports Bureau. Thus, the streak is active heading into 2009.

Ochocinco first established a new Bengals mark at 94 on Sept. 14 of last season vs. Tennessee, breaking a tie at 93 with Carl Pickens.

Ochocinco has played in 121 total Bengals games and has had a catch in all but four of them. His last game played without a catch was Game 4 of his second season, in 2002 vs. Tampa Bay.

Graham a close fourth: Bengals K Shayne Graham will open the 2009 regular season in fourth place in NFL history for career field goal percentage (85.64), and he is less than one percentage point off the lead in a very close race.

Mike Vanderjagt (no longer active) is No. 1 in league history at 86.47 percent. Nate Kaeding of San Diego is second at 86.13 and Robbie Gould of Chicago is third at 85.94.

Graham was 21-of-24 on FGs (87.5 percent) in 2008.

Here's the top five entering 2009 (all except Vanderjagt figure to be active):

PLAYER	FG	FGA	PCT.
Mike Vanderjagt .....	230	266	86.47
Nate Kaeding .....	118	137	86.13
Robbie Gould .....	110	128	85.94
Shayne Graham .....	173	202	85.64
Rob Bironas .....	109	129	84.50

Better than the best? As far as Bengals coaches are concerned, K Shayne Graham is the true No. 1 in all-time field goal accuracy.

Though Graham (85.64) ranks fourth in career NFL percentage, his career totals (173-for-202) include a 19-for-26 performance in previous NFL stops at Buffalo and Carolina. As a Bengal, Graham is 154-for-176, an 87.50 percent accuracy rate which is Cincinnati's all-time best and also tops leader Mike Vanderjagt's career mark (86.47).

Graham's record case: K Shayne Graham completed his sixth Bengals season in 2008. He enters 2009 holding the following club records:

- Points in a season: 131 in 2005.
- Field goals in a season: 31 in 2007
- Field goals in a game: Seven (in seven attempts), on Nov. 11, 2007 at Baltimore.
- Consecutive FGs made: 21, compiled from Games 1-10 of 2007.
- Career FG percentage: 87.5, on 154-of-176.
- Season FG percentage: 91.2 (made 31 of 34 in 2007).
- Consecutive PATs made: 158, compiled from Game 1 of 2003 through Game 11 of 2006.
- Career PAT percentage: 99.1, on 220-of-222.
- Season PAT percentage: 100.0 (shares percentage record with other kickers, but his 47-for-47 in 2005 is the most attempts in a season by a Bengals without a miss).

Dhani's margin was tops: Bengals MLB Dhani Jones not only won the team's 2008 tackling title, he won by a wider margin in his coaches' analysis than any previous player in the Marvin Lewis era.

With 165 stops on the season, Jones finished 53 ahead of second-place Brandon Johnson (112). For a full season under Lewis, the previous largest margin had been 46, from 2005, when LB Odell Thurman had 148 tackles and LB Brian Simmons had 102 stops.

Turnover tables are turned: Though the Bengals had a minus-two turnover differential in 2008, it was their first season minus under head coach Marvin Lewis. During Lewis' full tenure (2003-08), Cincinnati ranks third in the NFL in best differential at plus-40.

Prior to 2003, the Bengals had posted a minus differential for five straight years (1998-2002).

Here are the top five teams in differential since 2003:

TEAM	TAKEAWAYS	GIVEAWAYS	DIFFERENTIAL
Indianapolis	186	111	+75
New England	183	138	+45
Cincinnati	194	154	+40
San Diego	173	136	+37
Carolina	183	158	+25

Since 2003, when Lewis took over, Cincinnati has logged 194 takeaways, second in the league during that span to Baltimore (198). The Bengals have reached their 194 total with 115 interceptions and 79 fumble recoveries.

In points off turnovers since 2003, Elias Sports Bureau reports that the Bengals rank third at 579. Baltimore leads the NFL during that span with 626, and Indianapolis is second at 594.

A stat that matters: The Bengals are 32-5-1 in regular-season play under Marvin Lewis when logging a plus in turnover differential. That's an .855 winning percentage.

With a minus differential, Cincinnati's record under Lewis is almost a mirror image at 5-31-0 (.139).

The Bengals are 9-13 under Lewis (.409) when the differential has been even.

More extensive league-wide numbers bear out the Bengals' experience. Since the start of the 2000 season, here are the aggregate records of NFL teams with varying turnover differentials (minus differentials are not included because they are the exact reverse of the plus figure for the same numbers):

DIFFERENTIAL	W-L	PCT.
Plus-1	532-241-1	.688
Plus-2	451-86	.840
Plus-3	278-39-1	.876
Plus-4	144-8	.947
Plus-5 or more	73-2	.973

Overall, combining the five differential levels listed above, NFL teams with any plus have a winning percentage of .797 since 2000. The combined W-L record is 1478-376-2.

For the 2008 season only, teams with a plus had a 156-48-1 record (.763).

Offense smooth in scrimmage: Looking for consistency in 2009 with a revamped line, the Bengals offense got off to a good start in the club's annual Intrasquad Scrimmage in training camp on Aug. 7 at Georgetown (Ky.) College. Four running backs combined to rush for 100 yards on 18 carries (5.2 avg.), and the team's three QBs completed 10 of 12 passes for 93 yards.

Under a special scoring system, the offense defeated the defense, 22-16, before a crowd estimated at 6500.

The offense scored a pair of rushing touchdowns, on a 38-yard run by HB DeDe Dorsey and on a nine-yard scramble by QB J.T. O'Sullivan.

LB Jim Maxwell led the defense in tackles with seven. S Chris Crocker had four tackles, and he scored four points for the defense with an interception against starting QB Carson Palmer. DE Michael Johnson of Georgia Tech, a third-round draft pick who has been impressive throughout preseason work, displayed his potential with the only two sacks of the contest.

Mock Game: QB Carson Palmer and WR Chad Ochocinco both had active outings in the Bengals' annual Mock Game on Aug. 8 at training camp, but their Black jersey squad, composed mostly of the team's starters, was upended 21-17 by the underdog White team before a crowd of 6200.

The Mock Game, played with moderate contact but no full tackling, is scored under a special system which in addition to normal scores, awards points for long gain plays, interceptions, fumble recoveries and forcing a punt.

Palmer passed 12-of-17 for 131 yards for the Black team, with a TD pass (12 yards to Ochocinco) and one INT. Ochocinco led all receivers in catches (seven) and yards (78), but the White team duo of QB J.T. O'Sullivan and WR Jerome Simpson made the highlight play of the day with a 63-yard TD connection.

TV streak at 68: In each of the last 68 TV ratings weeks that have included a Bengals regular-season or postseason game, the Bengals have been the top-rated show among all programming in the Cincinnati market.

The streak began on Dec. 5, 2004, when a wild Bengals win at Baltimore outpolled all other programs for the week. It hit 68 when the 2008 regular-season finale vs. Kansas City drew a 23.5 rating, easily outpolling the second-place program, which was also an NFL game — Dolphins vs. Jets at 12.5. The Bengals' rating more than doubled the top non-sports program, "Two and a Half Men," which scored 10.4.

The rating number indicates the percentage of market households tuned to the game — including those not watching TV at the time. The highest Bengals rating during the streak has been 45.5 for the Pittsburgh playoff game on Jan. 8, 2006.

The high rating of Bengals games has occurred despite the fact most games are played in the afternoon, when overall TV viewership is not as high as it is during the evening.

Almost a half-century: For more than four decades, according to the highly respected Harris Poll, the NFL has been the most popular sport in America.

In its most recent survey, released in January of this year, Harris reported that pro football is the favorite sport of more people (31 percent) than the combined total of the next three pro sports — baseball (16 percent), auto racing (eight percent) and men's pro basketball (six percent).

Pro football moved ahead of baseball as fans' favorite in 1965 and has held the top spot ever since. Also, pro football has gained in popularity more than any other sport since 1985, with a seven percent increase (from 24 to 31 percent).

The third-favorite sport in the January 2009 survey was college football at 12 percent, meaning that football is the favorite sport of 43 percent of America's fans.

Bengal bites: WR Chad Ochocinco and LS/TE Brad St. Louis are the only players on the Bengals roster whose Cincinnati tenure predates the 2003 arrival of Marvin Lewis as head coach; St. Louis began his career in 2000 under head coach Bruce Coslet, and Ochocinco opened in 2001 under Dick LeBeau ... Bengals head coach Marvin Lewis led the NFL last season in percentage of successful coaches' replay challenges, upheld on six of seven tries (85.7 percent). He tied for third in most total plays reversed with six, just one off the league lead ... In six seasons under Lewis, the Bengals have averaged only 9.2 fumbles lost per season; prior to Lewis' tenure, the Bengals average for 16-game seasons was 13.9 fumbles lost ... Cincinnati's all-time preseason record is 88-94-2 ... The Bengals are 16-25 in preseason openers, including 10-19 on the road ... The Bengals were 2-0 in 2008 in games when one player had 25 or more rushing attempts, and they are 22-1 in the last 23 regular-season games with a 25-carry runner. Both of last year's 25-carry games were posted by HB Cedric Benson ... The 2008 season saw five two-point conversion attempts in Bengals games, and none were successful; the Bengals went zero-for-two and opponents went zero-for-three.

Bengals quotes

Head coach Marvin Lewis, on the upcoming season:

"As coaches and players, I think we're in a good spot. We know the direction. We know where the enemies lie. We know we've got to win on the road, we've got to win on the West Coast later in the year, and we've got to win in the division. When you evaluate what wins in the NFL, you have to have chunk plays — big chunks of yardage — and you have to eliminate those plays on defense. You can't turn it over, you have to get turnovers, and you have to win on third down. Year after year, of your 12 playoff teams 11 of them are going to be excellent in all those areas. One might sneak in that may not be as good doing one of those things."

Lewis, on WR Chad Ochocinco's bid to put a subpar 2008 behind him:

"He's got a job to do. He's got to earn his spot and get back to the way he was playing. He has to have a really good training camp, and so far, it looks like he's doing that."

WR Chad Ochocinco, on the 2009 preseason:

"I need training camp, and I really embrace it. You can work out all you want in the offseason, but there's really no substitute for these few weeks of concentrated work. It's especially important for me this season, when I'm trying to come back after a year when I struggled."

QB Carson Palmer, on the team taking no carry-over injuries into the start of training camp:

"This was the best offseason we have had in terms of getting us ready to play but not breaking us down. Sometimes coaches seem to have mindsets to break you down and wear you out, but that wasn't their mindset. As long as we don't get broken down in training camp, we have a chance to win a lot of games."

Palmer, on the premise that on a team with much to prove in 2009, he and Chad Ochocinco have "the most to prove":

"That's a fair assessment. With me having been out with an injury and Chad having had a down year, we have a lot to work on."

Palmer, on the offensive goal of a 1500-yard rushing season for HB Cedric Benson:

"It's easily doable if he stays healthy. He's the type of guy that always falls forward, always lunges forward. There may not be a big hole, but he'll get two or three yards out of it. If there is a big hole, he's the type of guy that can go 80 yards and no one's going to catch him from behind. That's something we haven't had in the past. He's exciting to watch."

Lewis, on Kyle Cook taking the No. 1 center spot with just five career games played:

"Kyle has been with us for a while, so we have watched him and understand him. He's a big, strong guy, he's smart and understands the game, and he's able to make the calls and get people put in the right situations all of the time. He's also athletic enough to block guys. Can he block the big guys on the nose that we play in this division? We need a special guy to do that, and so now it's a matter of making the transition to playing real football. He was at a point last year where he was close to getting a shot, and he broke his foot in kind of a freak deal in warmups (at Dallas). So it was an opportunity which was lost, and he gets a chance now to prove that he can do the job. I think everyone who has been around Kyle has a lot of confidence in him, because they have seen him work."

Lewis, on the defensive line:

"There's no doubt we should be better. Robert (Geathers) and Antwan (Odom) weren't on the field at the same time hardly ever last year. I think one or two games. Tank (Johnson) will help upgrade the interior, Domata (Peko) has been a solid player, and Pat Sims got his nose wet at tackle last year. He understands what it's all about. He had a really good offseason. He's excited about the opportunity to show he can be an every down player."

DT Pat Sims, on learning from DT Tank Johnson while he and Johnson compete for playing time:

"He's like my big brother. We're just gelling together. It doesn't matter who starts. Sometimes I'm going to play first and second downs and he'll play third, and sometimes it will be the other way around. There are also going to be times when we're going to be on the field at the same time. I'm just ready to play ball. It's great, I love contact. It's a physical game."

HB Cedric Benson, on expanding the role he has with the offense:

"One thing I really want to turn around is that I usually played just on first and second downs last year. Now I want to be able to play on third down and be featured in the passing game. I don't want to be singled out as a two-down player. And it all starts down here (in training camp)."

Defensive coordinator Mike Zimmer, on the core of the 2008 defense that returns this year:

"I've coached some really good defenses, but none that I respect more than these guys. I told them that the night before the last game. They came to work every single day, they listened to me, and they didn't complain. I was on them pretty good, so I respect all of those guys."

Zimmer, on the defense's prime goals for 2009:

"We've got to show some more firepower. We obviously need to rush the passer a lot better. I'm not just saying sacks, I know we've got to get more sacks, but we've got to get to the quarterback more in order to create a few more negative plays. My emphasis going in last year was making sure we got the run stopped, guys were in the right places. I think they understand that part now, and maybe we can start turning them loose more up front. That was my big project in the offseason."

S Roy Williams, on HB Cedric Benson:

"He has deceiving speed. He hits that hole, and you think he's jogging, and then he's in another gear. He's a great back. He's got great vision. He has a nice punch. He has lot of (tough) dog in him. He doesn't want to back down."

LB Rey Mauauga, on "leading the team in autograph signings" at training camp:

"I'll stay on the fence until I get kicked out. I'm just showing them I'm glad to be here. Show them I love the team. Kids are calling my name. It's a dream come true."

Position-by-position roundup

Quarterbacks: After playing in only four games last season due to an elbow injury, two-time Pro Bowl selection Carson Palmer returns in full health and once again is set as the cornerstone of the Bengals' bid for a return to the playoffs. Palmer's elbow injury healed without surgery by the end of the '08 season, and he participated fully in all the team's '09 offseason work. In 2007, Palmer re-set his own Bengals records for passing yards (4131) and completions (373). Also in '07, Palmer became the fifth-fastest passer in NFL history to reach 100 TDs, hitting the century mark in his 59th game played. His list of Bengals records also includes career marks for passer rating (88.9) and completion percentage (63.7) as well as season marks for TD passes (32) and passer rating (101.1). Opening the preseason at No. 2 on the depth chart is seventh-year pro J.T. O'Sullivan, signed by the Bengals in March as an unrestricted free agent. O'Sullivan had his busiest pro season in '08, starting eight games for San Francisco. He posted a 73.6 passer rating, with eight TD passes and 11 INTs. Also competing for the No. 2 job is second-year pro Jordan Palmer, who was impressive in '09 offseason work after making his pro playing debut with brief action last season for Cincinnati. Jordan Palmer entered the NFL in 2007 as a Washington draft choice but was not in the league during the '07 regular season. He is Carson Palmer's younger brother.

Halfbacks: Free agent acquisition Cedric Benson strongly claimed the Bengals' No. 1 rushing position last season after joining the team in late September. Playing in just 12 games, he led the team in rushing yards (747) and yards from scrimmage (932), and it's expected that his contributions will accelerate after a full offseason in the Bengals system. Benson did not enjoy great success in three NFL seasons (2005-07) with Chicago, but he was hailed by Bengals coaches and teammates as an exemplary team player, and he now has the chance to fulfill the expectations that accompanied him when he was made the fourth overall pick in the 2005 draft. His University of Texas career included 5540 rushing yards and the third-most TDs (64) in NCAA history. As the preseason schedule begins, the competition for the No. 2 HB slot figures to be fierce. Third-year man Brian Leonard, obtained in a May trade with St. Louis, missed almost all of last season with a shoulder injury but played every game with seven starts for the Rams in '07. DeDe Dorsey also had injury problems last season, but the speedy fourth-year player averaged 8.7 yards per rush in limited 2007 action. James Johnson made the Bengals roster as a college free agent last season, after opening the year on the practice squad, and he showed potential in December, including several key gains in a win over Cleveland. Sixth-round draft choice Bernard Scott posted consecutive 2000-yard rushing seasons in the NCAA Division II ranks at Abilene Christian, and he improved his roster prospects with impressive work in Bengals minicamps. Also looking for a spot is college free agent Marlon Lucky, a 218-pounder who averaged 4.6 yards per rush at Nebraska while also setting a school season record for receptions (75). Kenny Watson was released on Aug. 10.

Fullbacks: Cincinnati's FB competition is wide open as the preseason schedule begins. Seventh-round draft pick Fui Vakapuna holds the early No. 1 spot on the depth chart, after a Brigham Young career during which he displayed excellent athleticism for a 260-pounder. Looking for a comeback is seventh-year pro Jeremi Johnson. He was Cincinnati's No. 1 FB for five seasons (2003-07), but has struggled with conditioning issues, and last season he did not play, sidelined by a preseason knee injury and waived after completing his rehab. He was re-signed by the Bengals this past April. A player with potential to make a run from the bottom of the depth chart is college free agent Chris Pressley, a 260-pounder who aided individual running back seasons of well over 1000 yards in each of his three years of significant playing time at Wisconsin. J.D. Runnels Jr. was released on Aug. 10.

Wide receivers: The 2009 Bengals receiving corps looks for a return to past form by record-setting Chad Ochocinco and a big contribution from free agent signee Laveranues Coles. Ochocinco suffered the first down year of a stellar career last season, bothered by a persistent sore shoulder and gaining just 540 yards, but in the five seasons from 2003-07, he posted the five highest season receiving yards totals in Bengals history, making the Pro Bowl each year. By wide margins, he is the Bengals' all-time leader in receptions (612) and receiving yards (8905). Coles, a consistently productive NFL player over nine previous seasons, signed with the Bengals last March as an unrestricted free agent. He caught 70-for-850 with a team-high seven TD catches for the N.Y. Jets last season, and he has six career seasons of 70 or more catches. He has 44 career TDs and has started 16 games in seven of the last eight seasons. Opening preseason as the top contenders for the No. 3 spot are fifth-year pro Chris Henry and second-year player Andre Caldwell. Henry, a rangy (6-4, 200) and abundantly talented player, looks to fulfill his immense potential after being held back by off-field problems and resultant suspensions early in his career. He has had no off-field issues since coming off suspension for the last 12 games of 2008. He scored 15 TDs in his first two NFL seasons and has had two seasons of averaging more than 16 yards per reception. Caldwell, a third-round selection in the 2008 draft, started slowly last season due to injuries but showed promise in December and started the last two games in place of the injured Ochocinco. Seventh-year pro Antonio Chatman is in his fourth Bengals season. He logged Bengals highs of 21 catches and 194 yards last season, and he is also listed as the No. 1 punt returner as the preseason schedule begins. Jerome Simpson, a second-round 2008 draft choice, spent most of the '08 season in a learning mode after entering the NFL from the FCS college ranks at Coastal Carolina. Simpson has big-play potential the Bengals hope to tap this season. Also bidding for spots are first-year player Maurice Purify, seventh-round draftee Freddie Brown of Utah and college free agents Quan Cosby, Greg Orton and David Richmond. Cosby's preseason work also will include an opportunity to return punts.

Tight ends: The Bengals opened training camp with more apparent depth at TE than at any point in recent years, but injuries struck hard early in training camp. Starter Reggie Kelly, a punishing blocker and a team leader, was lost for the season on Aug. 3 when he suffered a ruptured Achilles tendon in practice. He was placed Aug. 5 on the Reserve/Injured list. Also on Aug. 5, fifth-year pro Ben Utecht suffered a concussion in practice and had to be transported to a hospital for precautionary exams regarding a possible spinal injury. Though all tests have come back normal and Utecht is not disabled in any way, he has been held out of football activity since the injury and will not play at New Orleans. Third-year pro Daniel Coats and third-round draft pick Chase Coffman now are at the forefront at TE. Coats, a tough blocker who also has played FB, has played in 31 of a possible 32 games since making the roster as a college free agent in 2007. Coats missed some training camp practice time with an ankle injury but is listed as probable for the New Orleans game. Coffman closed his Missouri career as the all-time NCAA receptions leader (247) among tight ends, and he won the John Mackey Award as the nation's best at his position. He caught 90 (NCAA tight end record) for 987 yards and 10 TDs last season. Also looking for playing time is college free agent Darius Hill, Ball State's all-time TD receptions leader (31). Veteran Brad St. Louis works in practice with the tight ends, but his primary job is as the team's long snapper.

Offensive linemen: The Bengals line will feature a new look at the tackle positions in 2009. Opening at the key LOT spot is fourth-year pro Andrew Whitworth. Whitworth started Games 1-10 at LG last season, missing the last six games due to an ankle injury, but he is fully recovered and has experience at LOT from both 2006 and '07. A second-round Bengals draft choice in '06, he had not missed a game and had started 38 of 42 contests before being injured last season. Second-year pro Anthony Collins now holds the No. 1 ROT spot. Collins earned good reviews as a rookie last season, called on to start the last six games at LOT as an injury replacement. Hot competition at ROT could commence when Andre Smith of Alabama, the Bengals' top pick in the 2009 draft (sixth overall), reports to the team. But at press time for this release, Smith remained unsigned. Winner of college football's 2008 Outland Trophy, Smith has excellent quickness and fine pro potential as a pass blocker, but he earned his high draft status primarily through unmatched run-blocking power in the college ranks last year. The veteran mainstay of the Bengals line is RG Bobbie Williams, who has started 78 of a possible 81 games since joining the Bengals in 2004. His only missed games were due to an emergency appendectomy in 2006. Second-year pro Nate Livings opens preseason as the starting LG. Livings saw his first NFL regular-season action in '08, starting the final six games as an injury replacement, and he helped the club average 167.0 rushing yards over the final three games. Looking to upgrade the center position, the coaching staff has given the early inside track to second-year pro Kyle Cook. Cook delivered a strong performance in '09 offseason work, and the 312-pounder promises to bring more power to the spot. A new prospect at center is fourth-round draft pick Jonathan Luigs, a three-time finalist for college football's Rimington Award (top center) and the winner of the award in 2007. Third-year pro Dan Santucci opened training camp as the No. 2 center, but suffered a foot injury in practice and is out indefinitely, pending further examinations. The top backup tackle currently in camp is Dennis Roland, a second-year pro who spent most of last season on the Bengals practice squad but played in the last two games and started the season finale. Scott Kooistra is a valuable and versatile line member, opening this camp with a listing as the No. 2 RG. The seventh-year pro has seen action at both guard and tackle during his Bengals career. Fifth-year pro Evan Mathis joined the Bengals as a free agent in November of last year and played in one game. He opens camp as the backup LG, carrying 33 total games of NFL experience, with 15 starts. Second-year pro Andrew Crummey, who played in six games last year, is listed at guard as camp opens but can also play center. On Aug. 3, the Bengals signed rookie free agent OT Augustus Parrish of Kent State. Jason Shirley was switched from DT to G in practice as of Aug. 10.

Defensive linemen: Bolstered by injury comebacks, new additions and added experience, the defensive line could be one of Cincinnati's most improved positions in 2009. Robert Geathers and Antwan Odom, two veterans in their prime with good sack production in their pasts, will look for fully healthy years after battling injuries last season. Geathers, who missed five games with a knee injury last year, has 23 career sacks, and the sixth-year pro looks to replicate his 2006 performance of 10.5 sacks, most by a Bengal since 1983. Odom came to the Bengals last season as an unrestricted free agent, following a 2006 season with Tennessee in which he had a career-high eight sacks and a team-high 29 QB hurries. Odom had injury woes from early in training camp last year, however, and he was limited to 12 games with eight starts. Listed No. 2 at the ends are fifth-year pro Jonathan Fanene and fourth-year man Frostee Rucker, and both figure to press for significant playing time. Fanene had his first 16-game season last year and posted a career-best 50 tackles. Rucker has battled injury problems in his pro career, but the former third-round draft pick has been a playmaker when healthy, with five fumble plays (three forced, two recovered) in just 16 career games. Another high potential player in the mix at end is third-round draft pick Michael Johnson, a player with exceptional physical ability, and first-year DE Chris Harrington is also looking for a roster spot after playing in three games late last season. The starting tackles as camp opens are two rapidly developing young pros, Domata Peko and Pat Sims, and they are backed by Tank Johnson, an unrestricted free agent signee from Dallas who has a track record of providing pressure up the middle. Peko, a fourth-year pro, started every game at LDT for the second straight year in 2008, and he led the line in tackles (108), ranked third on the team. Sims broke into the line rotation as a rookie last season and started six of the last seven games, posting 50 tackles with a sack. Johnson, who started in Super Bowl XLI (2006 season) for Chicago, played in every game for Dallas last season and has 12 career regular-season sacks, plus 2.5 more in postseason play. Two rookie DTs are also in camp — seventh-round draft choice Clinton McDonald of Memphis and college free agent Pernell Phillips of Central State. Phillips is a Cincinnati native.

Linebackers: The Bengals got good production from the LB corps last season and look for an even better year in 2009. Talented Keith Rivers, Cincinnati's top pick in the 2008 draft, returns as the No. 1 WLB, but Rivers was able to play in only seven games last season, due to a broken jaw suffered in Game 7 vs. Pittsburgh. Through Week 7 last season, Rivers' 50 tackles ranked second on the team. The LB corps also has a high-profile new addition in second-round draft pick Rey Mauluga, who like Rivers is a product of the University of Southern California. Mauluga was rated by many analysts as a first-round talent, boasting great speed and a reputation as one of the hardest hitters the college game has seen. He opens his first pro camp as the backup SLB behind fourth-year vet Rashad Jeanty, who started 15 games last season and ranked fourth on the team with 97 tackles. The 247-pound Jeanty lends a physical presence to the front seven. The starting MLB is Dhani Jones, a 10th-year vet who has been an impact player since jump-starting his career as a Bengals free agent signee during the 2007 season. Last year, in his first full Bengals season, Jones led the team in tackles (165) by a wide margin. With the return of Rivers to the lineup, Brandon Johnson has been pushed back to the No. 2 WLB position, but Johnson played like a starter and then some in '08 as he replaced the injured Rivers. Over the nine games he started (Games 8-16), Johnson's tackle total of 90 was tops on the team. For the full season, he was second on the team in tackles with 112. The No. 2 MLB as preseason begins is Abdul Hodge, a fourth-year pro in his first full Bengals campaign. Hodge played in six games last season and also has prior experience with Green Bay. Rounding out the OLB corps are two NFL veterans, Darryl Blackstock and Jim Maxwell. Blackstock played in 12 games for Cincinnati last season, and Maxwell saw action in two contests after signing late as a free agent. Another MLB looking to crack the roster is college free agent Dan Skuta.

Cornerbacks: Two recent Bengals first-round draft picks — Leon Hall (2007) and Johnathan Joseph (2006) — are in their NFL prime and back to man the starting positions in 2009. Hall, entering his third season, leads the team in INTs (eight) and passes defended (37) over the past two seasons. He also has led the secondary in tackles for the past two seasons, totaling 84 last year. Joseph looks to increase his contribution after being slowed by injuries each of the last two years. Ankle and foot injuries limited him to eight games in '08, and though he played 15 games in '07, he was hampered in that season's first half by rehab from a minicamp foot injury. Despite his missed time last year, he finished second on the team in passes defended (14), and he has scored a TD in each of the past two seasons, one on an INT return and one on a fumble return. Third-year pro David Jones opened preseason in the nickel CB position, but he suffered a foot injury in practice and will be out an estimated three to five weeks. He played in 14 games with seven starts last year and had 44 tackles and seven passes defended. Second-year NFL player Geoffrey Pope is in his first full Bengals campaign after joining Cincinnati just before the '08 regular season. The former N.Y. Giant played in eight Cincinnati games last year. On Aug. 2, the Bengals signed free agent veteran Jamar Fletcher. Also looking for time at CB are sixth-round draft choice Morgan Trent of Michigan and Cincinnati native Rico Murray, a college free agent signee from Kent State.

Safeties: The safety spot looks like the Bengals' deepest in terms of proven NFL talent. Five-time Pro Bowl selection Roy Williams signed with Cincinnati in May as a free agent, after seven seasons with Dallas, and opens camp as the No. 1 SS. He was limited by injuries to three games last season, but has earned recognition as one of the NFL's most powerful hitters among secondary players. The No. 1 FS as preseason begins is seventh-year vet Chris Crocker, who had a highly productive second half of the '08 season for Cincinnati after signing as a free agent. Crocker logged 48 tackles in eight games, with 1.5 sacks, one INT, six passes defended and a forced fumble. Also pushing strongly for playing time will be third-year pros Chinedum Ndukwe and Marvin White. Ndukwe missed five games due to injuries last year, but the 2007 seventh-round draft choice has 25 games with 13 starts over his first two seasons, and he has logged five sacks (second on the team over 2007-08), four INTs and two fumble returns for TDs. White was felled last season by a serious knee injury (two torn ligaments) on Nov. 30, but he's expected to be back at full speed at some point during training camp. He has ability as a big hitter, and despite missing the last four games last year, he finished second among the DBs in tackles (81). The Bengals' excellent depth at safety continues with second-year NFL players Kyries Hebert and Corey Lynch. Hebert, a former Canadian League star, played in every game last season and had 19 tackles on defense while leading the special teams with 23 tackles. Lynch was limited to seven games by a knee injury last year, but he logged his first pro INT, and he looks to build on his Appalachian State reputation as one the FCS ranks' premier playmakers. Also bidding for a roster spot is college free agent Tom Nelson of Illinois State.

Special teams: Record-setting K Shayne Graham enters his seventh Bengals season in 2009, and Cincinnati looks for a notable upgrade in the punting game with the addition of fifth-round draft choice Kevin Huber. Graham ranks fourth all-time in the NFL in career field goal accuracy (85.64 percent), and his Bengals-only percentage is even better at 87.5, by far the best in franchise history. His list of club records also includes points in a season (131), consecutive FGs made (21) and most FGs in a game (seven). He also handles kickoffs. Huber, a Cincinnati native who played at the University of Cincinnati, led the nation in net punting in each of the last two seasons. He led the nation in gross punting average (46.9) in 2007 and posted a 45.0 mark last season. Huber is also slated to be the holder on place kicks. A good competition seems in store for the Bengals PR job, with veteran WR Antonio Chatman battling rookie WR Quan Cosby. Chatman averaged 7.5 yards on 21 returns last season. Cosby averaged 11.3 yards on 33 returns during his college career at Texas. WR Andre Caldwell averaged a solid 26.0 yards on 13 kickoff returns last season, having taken over the job late in the year, and he opens '09 in the No. 1 role. Cincinnati's kickoff and punt coverage teams both yielded averages in the NFL's top half last season, and four of last season's top six special teams tacklers are back, led by S Kyries Hebert (23 tackles in '08).
